AKIN BROTHER SOLUBLE CRESOL,

> NON-POISONOUS DISINFECTANT The coal tar derivatives CARBOLIC and CRESYLIC Acids, have been known for, many years as the most powerful and generally useful disinfectants, but their effective use is restricted by their insolubility in water at ordinary temperatures, and their caustic and poisonous action. In DAKIN BROTHERS' SOLUBLE CRESOL these Acids are combined in a soluble and noncorresive form. For flushing drains, latrines, washing floors large buckefful of water, is sufficient to provent putrefuction and destroy the contagious matter 9 A.M. of Typhoid, Small-pox, Diptheria, Chelera, &c. A weak solution sprinkled on the floor will drive away flies and mosquitoes. Used in the daily bath in the proportion of a table spoonful to a large tub of water it is very refreshing; it has a highly beneficial effect on the health-and prevents contagion. 22, QUEEN'S ROAD CENTRAL.

She of correspondited and tried to raise an outery, whereapon one of the robbers pulled out his sword and delivered a blow on her head, which knocked her down. Her assailant then kept watch upon her whilst his companion proceeded to ransack the house. What bears a suspicious character is that the thief went direct to a trunk in which Mrs. Almaric kept her jewellery, and breaking open the box took away the valuables: after this he tried other places, including the woman's religious fixtures, wherein of the races were very open, so that even were several images of saints, from the latter of the sporting prophets acknowledged themselves which the robber carried away the glittering diadems, &c. HONGKONG JOCKEY CLUB RACE MEETING, 1889.

FIRST DAY, 20th February, -The-Jockey-Club's Race meeting this year opened with the brightest prospects, and, if one can judge from the first day, will ronk as the Club's most successful meeting, from every point of view. The weather during the past week has fore in excellent trim, the result being that the weather, the whole Colony turned out to view the races, and after midday the town was wellnigh deserted. The attendance was certainly the largest that we ever remember having seen. The San Francisco correspondent of the N. C. amongst those present being His Excellency the set an example, only too rare in Hongkong, of punctuality, and the addling bell for the first kicking the fellow down stairs, the Editor race was rung promptly at half-past twelve well filled, as was also the free ground in course of people such as is rarely seen in this oclony, the enclosure presenting a most animated weather an unusually large number of ladies were in attendance, and bright and pretty costumes gave the necessary colour and light to the scene. With nothing to complain of as reing out the law under which Chinese emigrants | gards weather, with a plentiful number of spectators, and everyone, at any rate at the outset, whatever they may have been at the close, in the best spirits, it needed but good performances on the track to make the day a complete success, and this was not wanting. Rarely have lovers of sport, pure and simple, had a greater freat than that afforded yesterday. The fields were of the largest, and as already mentioned, the times of the quickest in the memory of the oldest sportsman. Taking the whole of the per-Bridges-street, the residence of a Portuguese formances, it is questionable whether there has ever been such a good all-round lot of ponies: there have certainly never been better than those who entered yesterday. If the remaining days of the meeting provide as good sport as the first, and there is no reason to believe that they will not, 1889 will be a year to be remembered in the annals of the Jockey Club. The events themselves were not destitute of surprises, although on the whole perhaps not more numerous than usual. As was remarked before, the quality was so good that most by no means sanguine as to the result of their tips. The largeness of the fields has already been touched upon, and was certainly notescription griffins' race, the Valley Stakes, for which no less than eighteen ponies entered, the largest number, if we mistake not, on record. Considerable apprehension is felt with regard to the safety of the inhabitants in the small villages to the westward of Chefoo, owing to a number of soldiers, estimated at 250, having mutinied at the forts, which are situated some six miles from here. THE STORY OF GORDON'S DEATH.

London, 18th January. Dispatches from Sunkim give an authort account of the death of General Gordon at the fall of the Khartonm. The story is told by a Greek who was present. He says:- " I was at Khartoum the night it fell. Gordon, who thought he had enough troops to defend the city, did not construct new trenches. The gaps were hold by Farig Pasha, but during the night the latter moved his troops to the other side, where he said they were wanted. Gordon had implicit confidence in Farig. | When the attack was made there was no resistance at the largest gap. Farig had sent to the Mahdi to say 'Unless you attack to-night all is lost.' Had the British troops arrived one hour before the attack, Khartours would have been held by Gordon. The night was filled with blood and flames, and the city passed from Gordon to the Mahdi, horrible with the shricks and cries."

The Greek says he had two Mahdist uniforms. one he gave to a friend and took the other himself. The Arabs rushed into his house and told him to go to the Government House, as all the great Mahdi officers were there to kill Gordon. When we arrived at the Government House he continued, "I saw Gordon Pasha smoking a cigarette on the balcony. With him were George Demetris, the principal medical officer in the Soudan, and Nicola Semindeta, the Greek consul. The 500 dervishes who were sent by the Mahdi to take Gordon alive were at the foot of the stairs. "Gordon coolly left the balcony. The others arged him to fly. He indignantly refused to leave his post, but went in, put on his uniform and sword, and, coming out, looked proudly down on the enery sea of upturned faces. 'Whom seek ye? he said. 'Gordon Pasha,' 'I am he. Come up here.

The Mahdi's Generals came up, and Gordon met them, saying, "I am he," and handed them his sword in a military manner, surrendering according to war usages. Nassas, a General seized the sword and struck Gordon a cowardly blow. He fell, rolling down stairs, and as he rolled another stabbed him again, and then Gor and taken to the Mahdi. In that event he would be backed by Austria. The facts of the case, however, are that Prince Alexander has carefully avoided all reference to Bulgarian affairs, although there is ground for belief that the Czar is rather more inclined to a reconciliation than he has been heretofore. Nevertheless, more probability attaches to the rumour that Prince Alexander contemplates entering the Austrian army, as his father, did. Archduke Albrecht, Inspector-General of the army, and Crown Prince Rudolph have both shown unusual interest in his presence in the Austrian canital.

It is reported that Pozzo Potrovic, who accompanies the daughters of the Prince of Montenegro to St. Petersburg, will submit to the Czar a plan for forming a Balkan confederation This would consist of Greece, Roumania, Servia, Bulgaria, and Montenegro. Greece, according to the scheme, would have the presidency of the confederation, and the whole thing would be under the protection of Russia.
